

THE AMR REGIONAL AIR FORCE DIRECTORY 2011

Prepared by Adam Baddeley

| FEBRUARY 2011 |

AMR's Regional Air Force Directory of the various air forces, naval air arms and army aviation assets across the Asia-Pacific Region returns in our first issue of 2011, which coincidentally is also our eleventh issue of the Directory. The Asia-Pacific Region has found itself recovering quickly from the economic damage of the past few years. New – notably China's J-20 and upgraded aircraft have continued to be acquired and developed across the services, enhancing tactical mobility, improving air superiority capabilities and enabling advanced Electronic Warfare and Intelligence Surveillance and Reconnaissance missions.

As before, the Directory has been compiled from a range of open sources from around the world, AMR's correspondents and discussions with industry and military personnel throughout the year. AMR would like to thank those who have scratched their heads and provided answers to our questions. To claim absolute accuracy in this endeavour when for example trying to gauge serviceability levels on North Korea's aircraft would invite hubris on our part. We would therefore like to encourage readers over the next twelve months who can add information to either contact us in person at the year's shows and exhibitions or by e-mail.
